

SCI-FI DASHBOARD VISUAL REFERENCE CATALOG

15 style languages | 43 sourced visuals | 47 named examples

How to read this catalog

A research board for dashboard art direction, not a licensed asset library

SOURCE ORDER

Studio or designer portfolio, named interview, specialist archive, then a film-still source.

IMAGE STATUS

Each visual is a study reference with its source page listed. Rights stay with the credited owner.

STYLE BINDING

Each HELM language has a native use, a hierarchy pattern, a motion pattern, and a known cost.

PRACTICAL TEST

Judge a screen at three scales: room distance, laptop distance, and a cropped mobile view.

COLOR RULE

Color marks system group or state. It should not act as decoration across every panel.

DENSITY RULE

Dense screens need a clear focal reading. Ambient data belongs outside the main task zone.

HELM style map

Fifteen visual languages arranged by native dashboard use

#	Language	Native use	Primary visual device	Main risk
1	Command-Console	Calm monitoring across many systems	Rounded elbow frames, sweeping bars, grouped zones	Too many colors or narrow labels at distance
2	Tactical HUD	Live telemetry with one critical number	Reticles, radar arcs, gyroscopic rings	Decoration can bury the central reading
3	Industrial Terminal	Logs, events, audits, text-heavy status	Text tables, boxed readouts, cursor, pictograms	Weak chart language and an impersonal tone
4	Vector-Wireframe	Sparse geometry, trajectory, archival time series	Converging lines, wireframes, reticles, countdown	Poor magnitude encoding when fills are absent
5	Gestural Holographic	Investigation, drill-down, relationship work	Floating panes, object-like video, depth stacking	Transparent-screen glare and arm fatigue
6	Hard-Realism Tactical	Multi-unit operations and plausible enterprise use	Faction color grammar and clear system zones	Can look generic without a strong faction grammar
7	NASA-Utilitarian	Engineering, mission status, precision audiences	Telemetry cells, orbital diagrams, dense grids	Low spectacle can feel flat in sales settings
8	Sonar-Surveillance	Security, anomaly, network, threat monitoring	Point clouds, wireframe space, scan fields	The visual language carries an ethical surveillance mood
9	Neuro-Medical	Clinical, anatomical, regulated, QA data	Volumetric regions, orthographic panels, isolated anatomy	Cold tone and limited brand personality
10	Corporate-Liner	Public information, wayfinding, onboarding	Concierge cards, cutaways, large friendly numbers	Over-simplification can make expert data feel childish
11	Tabletop-Motion	Joint review, evidence rooms, deal rooms	Cards as physical objects with cross-reference lines	Motion can slow readers who need fast scanning
12	Neon-Grid	Entertainment, gaming, nightlife, high-energy moments	Glowing grids, circuit traces, ribbon paths	Glow cuts contrast and causes fatigue
13	Monochrome-Blueprint	Engineering, facilities, restraint-first brands	Blueprint linework and symbol-only controls	Symbol-only controls demand training
14	Diegetic Wearable	Wearables, mobile status, in-place feedback	Body status strip, projected panels, locator trail	Three-dimensional maps are weak navigation tools
15	Retro-Forward	Heritage, museums, archives, long time horizons	Analog vector lines, blueprints, physical switches	Low resolution limits density and accessibility
